Moscow Asserts Speculation Is Premature

By Gary Lee Washington Post Service MOSCOW -- Mikhail S. Gorbachev, the Soviet leader, has set aside the last week in October for a possible summit meeting with Presdent Ronald Reagan in the United States, according to diplomatic sources here, and left the second nall of November open as an alterrative time.

The dates are tentative and not due to be set until the Soviet foreign minister, Eduard A. Shevardnadze, and Secretary of State George P. Shultz meet in Washington from Sept. 15 to 17, the diplo-

White House sources said the Reagan administration is now opcrating on the "working assumption" that a summit meeting will take place in the United States in late November.

In Los Angeles, Mr. Reagan said Friday that he supports "the idea of a summit," but declined to comment on the report about a meeting, The Associated Press reported. "You know that I support the idea of a summit," he said onal Herald Tribune The mutinous troops, this time, were not loyal to Ferdinand E. Marcos. Nor, it seems, were the rebellion's leaders acting on behalf of Juan Ponce Enrile, President Corazon C. Aquino's former de-fense minister and a habitual contender for presidential power.

Rather, the mutiny in the Philippines on Friday, more than any of the four previous coup attem against Mrs. Aquino, is symptomatic of a leader-ship crisis that has grown increasingly apparent over the past several months.

This has made the insurrection, which erupted in central Luzon and spread quickly to the presidential palace, fundamentally different from the others Mrs. Aquino has faced since ber rise to power 18 months ago.

to be personal ambition, but the clearly deteriorating security situation and the government's inability to reverse it. And the deep frustration behind the assault on the presidential palace is not limited to those in uniform.

Filipinos of all classes express growing di pointment with a leader who has shown little sign of being up to the many critical tasks confronting her. Even those who stand to benefit most from Mrs. Aquino's sense of moral purpose and social justice are coming to recognize that these qualities are simply no longer enough.

What we need is authority, a sense of direction," a discouraged government economist said privately after a recent presidential press conference. "Instead, she is giving us milk and cookies."

Few Filipinos, even now, would deny the administration's accomplishments. Attacking the worst excesses of the Marcos years, Mrs. Aguino has restored the constitution, cleaned up the election process and installed the first working Congress since Mr. Marcos declared martial law 15 years

But too many other tasks are being left untended, too many opportunities squandered. On one issue after another, the president has shrunk from using her authority, creating a leadership vacuum

On the crucial question of agrarian reform, for instance. Mrs. Aquino was shocked into action only when security units killed 19 protesting peasants outside the palace in January. She has now left the issue to a Congress immersed in fractious bickering a month after its inaugural session

When Congress opened last month, Mrs. Aquino touched off an unnecessary dispute on debt repudiation by complaining publicly about the nation's treatment by foreign banks during a recent round of rescheduling talks. Even the surge of labor unrest that immediately

TOKYO - Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone has asserted that deployment of Japanese mine-sweepers in the Gulf would not violate the constitution, press reports said Friday. His declaration marks a shift in the official Japanese position. The constitution bars the foreign deployment of any Japanese forces. "Even if the maritime self-de-

Enterprising Ranchers Find Riches in Ostriches

RUSH SPRINGS, Oklahoma - The dust on the road in front of Kenneth Roberts's Okie Ostrich Ranch has been as thick as smoke for weeks as sightseers and live-stock producers come from around the country to look over some of the most exotic creatures ever to grace an

Here in southern Oklahoma, where cattle, wheat and watermelons are hardly worth the money it takes to raise and harvest them, a group of ranchers are making a forture raising the world's largest bird. A breeding pair of adult ostriches fetches up to $10,000. Year-old pairs sell for $6,000. And ostrich chicks go for $750 each.

Ever since the bottom fell out of the markets for the major crops and livestock, the state and federal authorities have urged farmers to consider raising other products. Efforts to diversify U.S. agriculture have included programs in the South to raise kenal, a tall grass that many hope will replace trees as a stock for making paper. In the West, kiwi fruit and pistachios have helped some growers hang on to their farms.

Never, though, has a brand-new farm industry yielded riches like those flowing into the pockets of ostrich ranchers.

As in most stories involving profits in farming the source of this new wealth can be traced to somebody else's misfortune and a bit of homegrown imagination Last year. President Ronald Reagan signed the Comprehensive Anti-Apartheid Act, effectively preventing South African ranchers from exporting most of the 50,000 to 90,000 hides that U.S. manufacturers need each year to satisfy the market for ostrich boots, purses and gloves.

Dale Coody, a dairy farmer from Lawton, Oklahoma, 35 miles (56 kilometers) southwest of Rush Springs, was one of the first to recognize the ostrich potential. In the Southwest, ostrich boots cost $500 a pair. So in 1983 Mr. Coody bought a male and three female ostriches from a monastery in Oklahoma City, which had kept them as

Since then, he has expanded his operation to 50 adults, making him the largest of Oklahoma's 20 ostrich ranchers. He estimated that 100 ranchers are raising the two-toed, swift-footed, flightless birds in at least 30 states.

"I started it as a novelty, raising them just for pets," said Mr. Coody, 51. "Only after I was in it did I see what the potential was for a national industry."

The goal of Mr. Coody and the other ranchers is to produce a national flock of 30,000 to 100,000 birds, large enough to satisfy the boot and purse makers and rich enough to begin promoting low-fat, low-cholesterol ostrich meat, which Mr. Roberts said tastes like a mix of pork and turkey. In the meantime, ranchers are making more money than any cattle rancher for miles around by selling ostriches to other commercial farmers and backyard hobbyists from Oregon to Florida and from Canada to Puerto Rico.

"We're 10 to 12 years away from having enough ostriches to supply a processing plant," said Mr. Coody, who is considered the father of the U.S. ostrich industry.

The birds, native to northern and southern Africa, thrive in Oklahoma's hot, dry summers and rugged win-

"Basically you treat them like stray cats," he said, while scratching the long neck of a magnificent eight-foot (2.4-meter) male he named Henry. "All they require is food and water and a half-acre."

Only in the mating season, from March to July, do the birds become aggressive. Females, which are cloaked in gray plumage, lay eggs every other day, from 30 to 50 eggs in a season. The black-feathered makes guard nests that are as big as buffalo wallows dug into the sandy Oklahoma

Athletes From 165 Nations To Compete in Rome Meet

ROME — Four years after the first World Track and Field Championships, almost all of the world's elite athletes have assembled here for the second championships, which begin Saturday. By Friday, 1,700 athletes from 165 countries had arrived in Rome.

Since the 1972 Munich Olympics, the only major international track and field competition not affected by boycotts has been the World Cup, which is sponsored every four years by the International Amateur Athletic Federation, and the first world championships, held in Helsinki in 1983.

The 1976, 1980 and 1984 Olympic Games were all hurt by boycotts, as were last year's Commonwealth Games in Edinburgh, Meets such as the European Championships, the Pan-American Games and the African Championships by definition do not accept competitors from around the world.

Primo Nebiolo, president of the athletic federation, said Friday that competition should be at least as good, and maybe better than in Helsinki four years ago. The participation of the Soviet Union and East Germany is expected to provide a higher standard than at the 1984 Olympics in Los Angeles — especially in women's events.

The gold-medal events were to begin Saturday with the men's 10,000 meters and shot put and the women's marathon. Page 13.

South Korean Police Block Rallies and Turn Back Funeral

SEOUL - The South Korean government began a sweeping crackdown against its critics Friday, blocking rallies in several cities, rounding up scores of activists and intervening in the funeral of a shipyard worker killed in a labor

- The day's activities, culminating in violent confrontations between the police and several hundred students in a working-class suburb of Scoul, was the government's greatest show of force since the ruling party promised democratic reforms two months ago.

Coming after two months of relative liberalization, the government's new hard line seemed sparked by fears of radical studentlabor cooperation in protests. In the past such fears have been used to justify military intervention in the political process.

The day's activities also seemed to mark a failure, at least for now, by dissidents to align themselves with workers who have struck hundreds of companies recently.

A leading dissident organization had called for a general strike and large rallies in several cities to mark the death of the worker, but the police blocked the rallies and the strike did not materialize.

Perhans the most dramatic event of the day came when 2,000 police turned back a funeral procession from the Daewoo shipyard on Koje

Colleagues of the slain worker, 21-year-old Lee Suk Kyu, had planned to bury him in the provincial capital of Kwangju, against the wishes of his family, but the police essentially hijacked the hearse and led it to his hometown, Namwon.

Workers had argued that Mr. Lee, who was killed by a police tear gas grenade during a demonstra-tion a week ago, should be buried in a large city as befitted a "hero of the working-class struggle." Family members had pleaded to have him buried in their town.

The funeral had been delayed since Wednesday because of the debate. At one point the shipyard workers' union had agreed to a funeral in Namwon, but on Friday morning workers took the body and headed for Kwangju.

Police met the procession of 28 buses and cars and forced most of them to return to Koie Island. The labor dispute that led to Mr.

Lee's death was settled Wednesday, with workers and management agreeing on a pay increase.

Dissident groups have said that South Korea's repressive labor laws, which have essentially prohibited strikes and most national labor unions, have forced workers to seek assistance from outside. They also say that most strikes in the past two months have been spontaneous and leaderless, a reponse to the lifting of pressure after years of enforced low wages.

"The labor disputes are expressions of the workers who have been forced to sacrifice themselves in the gathered, however, and the large course of the nation's economic development," said an opposition party spokesman, Kim Tae Ryong. Thousands Protest for 2d Day in Beirut

BEIRUT (UPI) - Thousands of people rioted Friday in West Scient for the second day, blocking streets with burning tire smashing store windows and chanting stogens to protest difficult living conditions caused by the decline in value of the Lebanese pound.

Witnesses said the riots started early Friday in the mainly Spine Moslem southern suburbs, led by young men carrying sticks, iron rods, and stones. But the unrest soon spread to West Beirut, which is patrolled by Same.

Protesters blocked the Syrian-controlled road to Beirut International Amport and the nearby Ouzai highway, which connects the capital to southern Lebanon. Barcelona Controllers Call Off Strike

MADRID (Reuters) - Air traffic controllers at Barcelona have called off a 24-hour strike planned for Saturday, a spokesman for Spain's civil aviation authority said Friday.

The controllers accepted proposals made in a last-minute effort to avert the strike, which threatened chaos on the busiest weekend of the year. It was not immediately clear whether a strike planned for Sept. 5 was also called off.

The 136 controllers said they were owed back pay equivalent to $80% month for the past eight years. A 24-hour strike last Saturday caused severe problems at airports in the Balearic Islands and the Costa Brava, as well as several airports in other countries, notably Britain.

Air Service to Link Nepal and Tibet

BEIJING (LAT) - Air service between Katmandu, the capital of Nepal, and Lhasa, the ancient capital of Tibet, will start in mid-

LOS ANGELES — Leaders of the Nicaraguan rebels have asked President Royald Reagan to seek congressional approval for renewed military and nonlethal aid for the contras. But they asked him to hold any military aid in escrow unless the Nicaraguan government failed to comply with terms of a peace plan now being negotiated.

Under the rebel leaders' proposal, the nonlethal aid would be disbursed immediately after Sect. 20

A Babushka's Urgent Message No Longer a Heretic, Soviet Economist Presses for Reforms

CHAUTAUQUA, New York -One of the answers to the question How has the Soviet Union changed under Gorbachev?" sat in wicker chair in the Victorian splendor of the Atheneum hotel here Thursday, apparently unfazed by her new-found celebrity.

does, it will mean that our country is giving up the race and is headed power." she said.

Miss Zaslavskaya described Mr. Aganbegyan, 55, as an intellectual mentor who succeeded in putting together a team of progressive economists in Novosibirsk in the middle 1960s. She recalled how hitterly disappointed the group was after the failure of a half-hearted attempt at economic reform by the prime minister at the time, Alexei . Kosygin.

By the early 1980s, the Soviet economy had deteriorated to the point where Miss Zaslavskaya and ner Novosibirsk colleagues felt sure that reforms were inevitable. Their response was to organize a seminar in 1983 attended by 100 like-minded economists and sociologists.

"We were quite convinced that the time for changes was very near — if not tomorrow, then the day after tomorrow," she said. "We felt that the new political leadership" following Brezhnev "would ask us how we had got into this situation and what we should do about it." Miss Zaslavskaya said she and other members of the institute experienced "some unpleasantness" when an account of the seminar four months later. But no attempt was made to remove her as head of the department of social problems at the Institute of Economics and Industrial Organization in Novosi-

Under Mr. Gorbachev. Miss Zaslavskaya has become an important participant in the wide-ranging discussions on the introduction market mechanisms into the command economy. She said there are frequently beated arguments between reform-minded economists and bureaucrats in the state planning agency, Gosplan. A major change in direction occurred when the Communist Party's Central Committee decided in principle last month to grant autonomy to individual factories and reduce price subsidies. But Miss Zaslavskava cautioned that it was necessary to read the fine print of detailed "directives," which have yet to be published in full.

"There are many fine words" in the Central Committee resolution, "about loosening control over en-terprises," she said, "but they could all be canceled out by some little point" in the directives.

She said there is a tight link between attempts to reform the econ-omy and the introduction of greater democracy and glasnost. She said the widespread apathy of Soviet workers can be overcome only if politicians provide them with an nonest explanation of why the economy is in such a poor state.

11 will take 10 to 15 years to judge the reforms, she said, adding: "It's like renovating a house. It's very difficult to live in the house at the same time that it is being restored, but you are willing to put up with the inconvenience if you are convinced that you will eventually get the benefits."

MILLONS!

Strike it rich in Canada's Favorite Lottery. You pick your own numbers playing Lotto 6/49

That's right ... you can win millions by picking your own numbers playing Lotto 6/49—Canada's most popular Government Lottery. In fact, last year Lotto 6/49 paid out $354,736,589.00 in ALL CASH PRIZES. And it's all free of Canadian taxes. There are two draws each week for a grand prize guaranteed to be not less than $1,000,000.00 with many millions more in secondary prizes. Grand prizes often run into the millions and have been as high as $13,890,588.80. Imagine what you could do with that much cash! This is your opportunity to find out because now you can play the lottery that's making so many millionaires in Canada.

WHAT IS LOTTO 6/49?

Lotto 6/49 is the official Canadian version of Lotto-the world's most popular form of lottery. It's the lattery in which you pick your own numbers and it's called "6/49" because you select any 6 of 49 possible numbers from 1 to 49. Your numbers are entered in the Lotto 6/49 computer system and if they match the six winning numbers chosen in the draw-you win the grand prize. Or if you have only 3, 4 or 5 numbers correct you win one of thousands of secondary prizes available.

HOW CAN! PLAY?

Complete the attached order form and send it to Canadian Overseas Marketing along with the necessary payment. We will enter your numbers for the specified length of your subscription. You may select from 1 to 6 games for 10, 26, or 52 weeks. Each game gives you another chance at the grand prize for every draw in which you are entered. You receive a "Confirmation of Entry" by return mail acknowledging your order and indicating the numbers you have selected as well as the draws in which they are entered.

HOW DO I KNOW WHEN I WIN?

You will be notified immediately when you win a prize of $1,000.00 or more. Also, a complete list of all winning numbers will be sent to you after every tenth draw so that you can check along the way to see how you are doing. At the expiration of your subscription you will be sent a final statement of your winnings. All prize money will be converted to any currency you wish and confidentially forwarded to you anywhere in the world. So mail your order today—the next big pilots' union and the FAA on a Colombia and Venezuela Renew Border Dispute

By Alan Riding

CARACAS - A near-clash of naval vessels in disputed territorial waters in the Gulf of Venezuela earlier this month has provoked a series of angry exchanges between Colombia and Venezuela.

Fears of an armed confrontation have eased as both countries have lifted military alerts. But an intense war of words continues, fed by strong nationalist feelings in the two nations over the 33-year territorial dispute. The incident began Aug. 9 when

Colombian Navy corvette, the Caldas, entered an area of the gulf that has traditionally been patrolled by Venezuela. For almost a week, the Caldas apparently sought to assert Colombia's claims to sovereignty in the area Venezuela responded with a dip-

In Colombia, though, Mr. Lusinchi's speech was widely viewed as hostile, and leaders of the opposi-tion Conservative Party called on the country's foreign minister, Julio Londono Paredes, to boycott a high-level meeting on Central America in Caracas last weekend. Mr. Londono attended, but used the occasion to explain Colombia's call it to spur its economy. Repeating an deficit in the decade or so ahead, it will be inapt metaphor from the Carter era, they preach a locomotive role, as if the Federal Republic, with less than a tenth of the industrialized world's GNP and population, could pull its partners out of their morass. The Germans rightly reject this. But the fact remains that West Germany has a role - and isn't playing it.

The world economy suffers from too little growth, extremely divergent external payments positions and persisting differences between inflation rates. If the more stable economies, like West Germany's, began to oil their wheels (a better metaphor), less fortunate neighbors could start working the rust off theirs.

The West German economy is rich but warped. For too many years its growth has depended on exports, not home demand. The rise of the Deutsche mark is slowly ending the export boom, but domestic demand is not growing fast enough to create home-based dynamism. Last May, Economics Minister Martin Bangemann promised other governments to take action, understood to include more expansionary fiscal policy, if growth stayed weak. He was contradicted almost at once by Finance Minister Gerhard Stoltenberg. Now Mr. Bangemann himself has disavowed any intention to move in the promised direction.

Before talking about broken pleds critics should look at both sides of the problem. No one should want Bonn to reflate at the expense of price stability. The lack of inflation in West Germany is an anchor point for a still inflationary INTERNATIONAL HERALD TRIBLINE

Like clockwork, West Germany's allies world. And if it does not cut its budget in trouble because the present low birthrate means that government spending has to be financed by a shrinking number of taxpayers. Meanwhile, no responsible forecaster could entirely dismiss official West German claims that the economy is even now emerging from its sluggishness.

But none of this is fully convincing. Inflation has been virtually nil for four years. The last time it took off, in 1979. the reason was not the fiscal boost that the government had just applied but the second big rise in oil prices. The budget deficit is higher than expected this year, but only because stagnation depresses tax receipts. Economic forecasters inside and outside the Federal Republic see far less than the 2 percent growth that Bonn hopes for this year and next.

There must now be a big gap between the actual and the potential levels of demand sustainable over the next year or so. The normal cruising speed for West German growth may be under 3 percent, but throughout the '80s growth has been less than half that, which suggests scope for a catching-up process. Is it really to be believed that the spare resources built up in this decade - with unemployment approaching 9 percent — are unmobiliza-ble? There may be a mismatch of skills in the labor market, but until bome demand starts to rise faster the risk will be that it becomes greater and eventually un-bridgeable. West Germany owes it to itself and the rest of the world to take a new look at its economic prospects.

A Soviet offi-cial visiting the United States responded by saying that another Soviet official had indicated in a speech at the United Nations this week that the Kremlin was willing to do just tween the great powers. Loose Change for UNICEF

International travelers return home bearing modest collections of drachmas, pfennigs, pence, yen, shekels, balboas and whatever other kinds of coin circulate in the countries they visit. This leftover money usually has only slight value. The loose change is almost always put aside and forgotten. Suppose, though, that a way could be found to collect these insignificant amounts of money and pool them to spend on a good cause?

That is the idea that occurred a few years ago to Howard Simons, curator of the Nieman Foundation at Harvard. He began by generalizing from his own experience and assuming that an average visitor leaving a country ends up with about 50 cents' worth of unspent local money. If tourists to Spain, France and the United States alone contributed their leftover change, he calculated, up to $45 million a year could be collected. If that money could be channeled to, say, UNI-CEF, efforts to combat illness and premature death could be helped immeasurably.

Mr. Simons called his idea "Change for Good," and it is now becoming a reality. Earlier this summer a small airline, Virgin Atlantic, agreed to put collection envelopes for unwanted foreign change on two of its flights between London and the U.S. East Coast, Based on its first-month experience, $500,000 a year in throwaway coinage.

That would be a staggering accomplishment. If other air carriers adopted similar efforts, then almost certainly tens of millions of dollars could be raised each year to help save the lives of threatened children. This simple, sensible and low-cost humanitarian effort deserves the fullest cooperation. -The Los Angeles Times.

Gorbachev Has NATO in Political Trouble

WASHINGTON — "While the rhetoric of the East has softened, the Warsaw Pact's mili tary forces are stronger than ever." Those are the words of General John R. Galvin, the new American supreme commander of NATO forces in Europe. They should be given consideration by every government in the alliance and, indeed, by all ose in the West who value freedom. Whatever the outcome of the negotiations be-tween the United States and the Soviet Union on limitation of nuclear arms and verification of any such agreement, the Russians will remain in position of overall strength in Europe, taking into account tactical nuclear weapons, combat aircraft and helicopters, tanks, artillery and manpower.

During the last five years the Soviets have added the T-80 tank with reactive armor to their armored forces; introduced new types of attack helicopters and self-propelled artillery; raised the effective-ness of their chemical warfare forces. NATO, although its forces can show some improvement, has done nothing to match Russian progress, and the Soviets maintain their long-standing advantage in numbers of trained and reserve manpower. The danger to European stability and the future of the NATO alliance lies not only in Soviet aggression in Western Europe —a danger that has kept NATO in existence for 38 years despite a series of crises. There is also the danger seen by General Galvin and by his predecessor, General Bernard W. Rogers, that Soviet diplomatic pressure on individual members of NATO will force such members out of the alliance and into a futile neutrality in which they will be easy prey to com-munist political or military aggression. NATO's basic problem is that of convincing parliaments and peoples that money must be spent and young men and women must serve to provide an adequate defense. This problem has grown much worse since the ascent of Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev and an apparent softening of the Soviet position toward the West.

By Drew Middleton

On recent trips to Enrope, this writer has be impressed by the number of people, especial young working-class men and women in their 3 and 40s, who regard Mr. Gorbachev as a peadmaker and President Reagan as a warmonger.

This is a generation that does not remember properties that the control of the Czechoslov NATO Europe — the takeover of free Czechoslov.

kia and the blockade of Berlin. It does not ki why NATO is in place and cannot understand must pay in money and time to keep it. Politic of all parties in many countries can be blamed not explaining the facts to today's young peop General Secretary Gorbachev has said be is ing to address "a disparity in some elements." It really desires a lasting equilibrium between East West, he has an obvious course. Begin by reduct the size of the Soviet forces in East Germany in the other East European satellites, and the nul of conscripts in general. If the Soviet Union ber this, then the West can begin taking its pro-tions of peaceful intent seriously.

By doing so, Mr. Gorbachev would def strongest power bloc in the Soviet Union, the military-industrial complex. He has sniped publicly displayed such negligence that it could not openly defend itself. But major caus in the armed forces would seem, to a people that has always almost worshiped size, to invite disaster. Even in a day when a computerized killing machine can do the work of a rifle battalion, the Russian people rejoice in the thought of scores of divisions, thousands upon thousands of tanks and aircraft.

Not since the months immediately after the end of World War II have the wishful thinkers had such a field day. Then they misread the expansive nature of Soviet communism and the dictatorial regime of Stalin. Today too many are too eager to embrace Mr. Gorbachev and the rest of the Soviet leadership, believing that after 70 years of commu-nism the U.S.S.R. has suddenly changed. Such an attitude is gaining strength in the United States and is already strong in NATO Europe. The NATO governments face a serious political problem. While that attitude persists, it will be extremely difficult to impose the taxes and to maintain present conscription levels necessary for an effective deterrent force in Western Europe.

There is no discernible solution. A generation ago, whenever optimists detected a change in Soviet policies toward the West, Stalin or one of his successors would take some unilateral action, often of great ferocity, that would alarm the West. Until now, Mr. Gorbachev has avoided such action, although his forces remain in Afghanistan.

One other danger to American and European support for NATO should be mentioned. The Middle East remains not only the most explosive area in the world — a region where at any moment a fierce but, it is hoped, limited war might break out. It diverts men, materiel and money that might be used more profitably to build up NATO defenses in Western Europe. There is an old military axiom to the effect that you cannot be strong everywhere. It is one America might well heed.

Watch the German and Jewish Numbers in Moscow

BONN - On a recent trip to Moscow I discovered that Soviet officials, when questioned about prob-lems posed by citizens wanting to leave the country, reacted with the same degree of nervousness and irritation whether the visa applicants were Jews or Germans. The officials played down both issues, implying, at best, that foreign accept st, that foreign questioners should mind their own business. Valentin Falin, chief editor of the Novosti news agency and a top advis-er to Mikhail Gorbachev, was more articulate than others. "It is a good idea to refrain from politicizing the matter," he told me in his Moscow office. "The numbers are growing anyway ... We have no intention of holding back people who don't wish to live among us. However, the matter can only be resolved within the framework of Soviet laws, and without interference from outside powers." Antomatic equating of the situa-tions of the two minorities is certainly out of the question. But the verbal reactions of Kremlin officials point to

In recent months, as the superpowers seem to have moved closer to a major arms control agreement, there has been a remarkable increase in the number of exit visus for ethnic Germans and Jews. The "hard" and "objective" news of the day was not all that different, striking similarities between the plight of Soviet Jews and ethnic Germans who wish to go to the West.

Both belong to minority groups of about 2 million, many of whose members want to leave. And both can count on the solid support of outside organizations that advocate their cause, and — maybe more important — on countries willing to accept them. At least from the Soviet point of view, German and Jewish applications for exit visus have been closely connected. The numbers of visus granted are parallel. The statistics also say a lot about the status of relations between Moscow and Washington.

powers, but we ought to have freer trade in many frings.

There was even talk of arms control treaties. The Corrector quoted two other papers discussing record

The U.S. buildup in the Gulf has led to increased U.S. Saudi military cooperation, the Saudi source said. He declined to be specific. According to reports from Washington, the Reagan administration has obtained expanded landing facilities for carrier-based U.S. planes in a loosely defined secret agreement. In addition, advanced Saudi surveillance planes have reportedly worked more closely with U.S. forces in monitoring Iranian Navy and Revolutionary Guard vessels.

Four U.S. airborne warning and control system planes have been operating from Riyadh along with three acrial refueling planes since 1980 to provide military surveillance in the Gulf area.

Some 600 U.S. personnel have been based there to service them and Saudi Arabia's own AWACS radar planes, which are operated jointly with the United States as part of a training program, the informant pointed out. But Saudi Arabia has refused the toward Iran here could ease their reticence to be seen as part of the U.S. effort. But Saudi leaders have been careful to avoid any indication of this on the record.

King Fahd's government, like those of his predecessors on the throne, has in the past consistently chosen accommodation over confrontation and has avoided identifying itself too closely with Washington, Israel's main benefactor.

It is unclear, therefore, how long the new Saudi activism against Iran is likely to last or how far it is likely to lead the kingdom in cooperation with U.S. military policy in the

What is missing in all of these instances, as one Aquino loyalist puts it, is "preceptorship" - an ability to lead the nation, almost by instruction, toward the genuine consensus required to advance beyond longstanding political and economic problems.

Critics and supporters alike believe Mrs. Aquino is now too concerned with maintaining support among the widely disparate coalitions that backed her rise to power. The net effects of this, they say, are inaction on many important issues and too many decisions based on purely tactical considerations.

"It's not enough just to change governments," a university profes-sor said recently. "Sooner or later Cory is going to have to spend some political capital, before things get out of hand."

It is too late to spend such capi-tal gracefully. In the aftermath of the most serious coup attempt since Mrs. Aquino assumed the presidency, her choice seems to lie between asserting more authority or having none at all.

CUT THIS OUT TO LEARN FRENCH

Our concept at Ceran is that you first learn, then practise what you've learnt, which is the key to real progress. This is what makes us different from all the others. At Ceran you live French from morning to night, a minimum of 66 hours per week, which is only possible at a residential school, with mother tongue teachers. This is why our students say a week with us is worth three anywhere else. Our groups have an average of 3 people, and a maximum of 6, with a minimum of 34 lesson periods.

The Medieval Mind Revealed in Brass

T ONDON - Some exhibitions deserve to be seen for the works they display and others for the clues they provide to unsuspected art forms. "Witness in Brass," small, cluttered and slapdash as it may be, is one of those rare eve-openers. The Victoria and Albert Museum exhibition, which consists of 220 items tucked away in a back room of the Cole Wing through Nov. 1, focuses attention on brass funerary effigies, the least known yet the most original aspect of church art from middle Gothic to Renaissance times.

Few of those touring medieval churches in the British Isles, where the greater number of surviving monumental brasses are to be seen, even think of looking for them. In the twilight of cathedrals, the plaques set in slabs that form part of the paving are not easily made out

When row upon row of knights and dames lie on the floor like an army of shadows reclining in darkened garb on their bed of faintly gleaming brass, the effect must have been striking, as a photograph of the church at Cobham in Kent suggests. At close quar-ters, the handful of original medieval brasses in the show reveal an artistic vision unlike anything one usually associates with Gothic art. The necessity of cutting deep incisions in the metal and, above all, of retaining clarity in the outline led to far greater economy in strokes. By the mid-14th century, when sculptors were aiming at realism, striving to faithfully render every detail and every individual expression, the artists who engraved brasses were still producing stylized figures such as may be seen in the best known English brass, at Elsing. If anything, the figure of Sir John Hastings, who died in 1374 and is shown surrounded by weepers, calls for comparison with the earliest woodcuts, the so-called incunabula.

To those who commissioned them, they appear to have been of immense importance. This finds an echo in the words uttered by Henry V before the battle of Agincourt, as imagined by Shakespeare, "A many of our bodies shall no doubt / Find native graves; upon the which, I trust, / Shall witness live in brass of this day's work".

The documents exhibited at the Victoria and Albert say as much about human psy-chology in medieval England as volumes of social history. A canon of Hereford called Thomas de Lexham, who died in 1382, was anxious to be buried in the new chapter house that had been built in his time. In his for "a marble stone flat with the pavement to be placed over me on which choristers reading the obits and capitular lessons shall stand so that they may be more careful not to read badly or wrongly because they have their teacher listening beneath their feet."

Patrons often displayed a self-conscious coquettishness about the image they wished to leave of their physical appearance on their last day in this world. One Thomas Salter, who died in 1558, gave very definite instructions. The figure was to be three feet long in mass vestments, holding with both hands "the similitude of a consecrate ooste in a sunnie beame" above a chalice, his eyes closed "as all deademens eyes ought to be." He also wanted a prayer scroll, an inscription band beneath his feet, and a shield bearing the arms of the Salters' Company because I was in my youth one of the said company and liverey."

Others were equally concerned about the appearance of their wife — or wives when they had been married several times. The latter were not to wear newfangled attire offensive to common decency. Sir John Gage, who died in 1595, commissioned Gerard Johnson (1551-1612) whose initial sketch, miraculously preserved by his de-scendants, is in the exhibition. In the margin, Sir John says he is sending back one of his second wife's hats to be copied by the artist bowed & dressed as it shall stand upon their heades." He did not like the narrow Elizabethan waistline that had just come into fashion and requested dresses "not girded," unlike those in the sketch. A rubbing of the brass still visible in the church at West Firle in Sussex is shown next to the drawing. It proves that the artist complied. A woman, hands joined in prayer, wears an ample robe whose straight folds envelop the body. The rubbing also proves that Sir John was un-doubtedly right in aesthetic terms — the portrait in it has as much dignity as the sketch looks foolishly affected in its modish-

The establishment's passion for brasses was dealt a nasty blow shortly afterwards. In the cultural revolution triggered by the advent of Protestantism and its wholesale destruction of abbeys, monasteries, sculpture connected with religious devotion and anything that reminded one of Roman Catholicism, brasses were seen as a borderline case. Expressing interest in them could be dangerous. When the scholar John Stow wrote in 1598 a "Survey of London," in which he has left useful descriptions of several brasse was blamed for "being an Admirer of Antiqaccusation as threatening in Elizabethan England as one of leftist sympathies in the McCarthy era in the United States.

Concerning brasses, however, bigotry had to give in to snobbery. Brasses are a primary source of information on genealogy and heraldry and, thanks to human vanity, which ensured genealogic and heraldic painters their thriving business, notes and rubbings made by 17th century antiquarians have come down to us. Some make up for the loss of brasses in later times.

Occasionally, however, the authenticity of the source needs a careful check. The English establishment was not above faking documents to establish a convenient ancestry. Around 1620, Sir Edward Dering acquired a Roll of Arms, i.e. a long scroll on vellum with rows of blazons painted in genealogical order. The 61st shield was overpainted, clearly at his behest, with the arms of Richard Fitz Dering, and used by him as evidence of his supposedly ancient ancestry to obtain the right to wear arms with a Saxon motto - the roll with the faked blazon can be seen in the show. Next to it sits a photograph of a brass faked by Sir Edward in the church at Pluckley in Kent to shore up his lineage. It represents the figure of John Dering, who died in 1425, in passably good 15th century style. A careful man, Sir Edward had it set in an older slab. Unfortunately, the indents don't quite fit. The slab probably never carried a brass. To give it a more convincing look as a period piece, the forger made sure that bits were "missing" in the brass — it lacks the pillow and the crest. Alas poor Edward! He did not know that around 1425, the head, the helmet, the pillow and the crest would have been made from a single piece of brass. As his device shows no sign of wrenching or ripping off, it gives itself away as a fake to the modern art historian. But it had served its purpose - Sir Edward's claims were never challenged.

As antiquarian interest rose to a high pitch, it became fashionable to restore brasses damaged after thousands of feet had shuffled over them for centuries. But just as the establishment was not above tampering, the restorers were not averse to pilfering. An early 18th century drawing by one J. Kirkpatrick shows the Elsing brass with the eight weepers surrounding Sir Hugh Hastings still in place. By the time Thomas Martin drew the next sketch, in 1736, the figure of the Edward the Despencer as a weeper had gone. On Sept. 17, 1781, Sir John Cullum and the restorer John Fenn took an impression to record its condition prior to restoration. On March 16, 1783, Fenn accordingly removed the Earl of Pembroke weeper "to get it more securely fixed." But the figure was never returned.

Later losses were more decently anonymous. In 1904, an art historian discovered with some surprise the Lord Gray weeper in the Fitzwilliam Museum in Cambridge. It can only have been pinched. The identity of the villain has never been released.

In recent years, things have reached disaster proportions — for different reasons. In the words of John Page-Phillips, president of the Monumental Brass Society, which celebrates its 101st anniversary with the show, "a new problem has arisen. There is a steady stream of churches becoming redundant and therefore being demolished or converted to other uses. Any brasses must be re-moved." On second thought, it is probably more urgent to rush to the monuments than to the facsimiles or photographs of the brasses that they house. At the rate of the last decade, more destructive than World War II, not all that many brasses will be left in 30 to 40 years.

Poet's Wartime Muse

ONE of Washington's best kept wartime secrets has finally been revealed: the identity of the famous "Foreign Lady."

The mystery was born in Georgetown during the darkest days of World-War II against the backdrop of a Nazi-dominated Europe; its central

Monumental Sculpture On Show in Monte Carlo

By Charlotte Mosley MONTE CARLO — Visitors to Monaco this summer and early fall have been seeing an unexpected and free exhibition of monumental sculpture in the public gardens and in the Casino.

It almost didn't come to pass as the Monaco authorities feared that a confrontation betw pieces of sculpture and the Belle Epoque setting might scandalize the public. They also had to agree to concrete being poured into the scarce and carefully tended lawns to serve as bases for the sculptures. That the exhibition is taking place says much for the persuasive powers of the Marisa del Re Gallery of New York, which organized the show, on until Sept. 30.

The protracted negotiations have inevitably meant compromises and half-measures. The overall result is a rather unadventurous choice of pieces that lack any unifying theme. In the main the artists seem

The beautifully articulated "Three Part Object" by Henry Moore, executed in 1960, is a return to his early obsession with elephant bones and skulis. André Masson's "Brother and Sister," a powerful and humorous Surrealist composition, was executed in 1942 and cast in bronze in 1986. Another ten minutes' walk will take you past works by Karel Appel, Arman, Alexander Colder, Cesar, Louise Nevelson, Arnaldo Pomodoro and George Segal. Unfortunately the most exciting sculpture in the show is also the least well-displayed. The loan agreement covering Isamu Nogu-chi's "Fullness with Void" stipulated that the work should be shown indoors, so it is in the attium of the Casino, where the elaborate decor is out of keeping with the sobriety of the piece. To make matters worse, the sculpture is so heavy that the Casino floor is only strong enough to support it between the two pillars where it has been unhappily sandwiched. Although it is impossible to get an unobstructed vies around the massive block of granite, one can still appreciate Noguchi's supreme respect and mastery of different textures.

Marisa del Re hopes that "Mone-Carlo Sculpture 87" will be the first in a series of biennial shows to be held in the principality. Recession? Predict the Path Of a Falling Scrap of Paper

By LEONARD SILK

New York Times Service EW YORK -- President Truman longed for a onearmed economist who would not keep saying "on the one hand" and "on the other hand." So do virtually all other decision-makers in government and business.
But, as strong as the desire for unambiguous and unconditional forecasts may be, the real world is one of uncertainty and contingency, as shown by Kenneth Arrow, the Nobel Prize-winning economist at Stanford University.

Horace W. Brock, president of Strategic Economic Decisions Inc. of Menlo Park, California, and a former student of Mr. Arrow's, maintains that the inability of economists to make exact odds helpful, or does forecasts "should no more indict economics than physics should be indicted for the inability of physicists to predict the path of a scrap of paper falling from a desktop."

What it does imply, he believes, is that economists should build uncertainty into their models, and use their own and other people's judgment to make forecasts that at least tell decision-makers what the odds are on any outcome. These days, with the bull market in stocks and the expansion of the U.S. economy more than five years old, the question worrying investors and business executives is: Will there be another crash?

Mr. Brock breaks down the future like this: What will trigger the next recession? How bad will it be? How will the government respond? What will happen to interest rates, the dollar, snocks? His S.E.D. group does not think that a U.S. recession is likely within the next year. It says that the probability of a recession before 1990 is 45 percent, less than even money. But it says, "One thing is certain: A contraction will come — most probably by surprise." When it does, the financial markets will be turbulent, and the careers of investment managers and traders will depend on whether they draw right or wrong inferences about the future.

S THINGS look now, three events could start a recession: a a credit crunch, in which a tightening of credit by the credit crunch, in which a tightening of credit by the Federal Reserve forces businesses and banks to cut their investments; a financial crisis, which could result from a Third World dale crisis and the winth bond? market bank World debt crisis, a collapse of the "junk bond" market, bank failures, a collapse of Japanese stocks or a nosedive of the dollar; or an "autonomous" contraction of the economy stemming from an exhaustion of consumer spending, with real income stagnating and consumers overburdened with debt.

How severe will the recession be when it comes? The probabilities range from very severe to moderate.

Some factors should, however, mitigate the severity of the recession: the Fed's resolve to prevent a serious slump; the growth of liquidity in housing and other asset markets as a result of financial innovations, and the advent of the service economy. with less cyclical fluctuation than in manufacturing. As the S.E.D. calculates the odds, the severity of the next recession should be comparable to the average of all the recessions since 1920. That would mean an average drop of 6 percent in the real gross national product, which is twice as severe as the average recession since World War II.

The stock market, according to S.E.D., will fall more than usual, although it foresees extremely different paths that the market may take. It sees a 40 percent probability that the Standard & Poor's 500-stock average would fall between 30 and 40 percent, a 25 percent chance that it would fall between 40 and 50 percent and a 15 percent chance that it would fall more than 50 percent - truly a crash.

But are such probabilities helpful or do they only compound the uncertainity facing the individual investor? Since no date is given for the recession that would spawn these stock market probabilities, the question that the investor faces is whether to hold on for extra gains until the recession is more clearly in sight

French Luxury Firms Seduce Giants For Family Concerns, Mergers Are Part of l'Art de Vivre

By Jacques Neber PARIS - The first to dwindle were the little cheese stores and neighborhood groceries. Now, France's family-owned luxury goods companies have become an endangered species.

The family-dominated makers of gold pens, fancy perfumes, designer clothes, cognac and scores of other products for the world's rich and status-conscious have been falling into the hands of larger groups. The ones that re-main are now facing increasing are either to sell out or risk being left behind in the dust.

Luxury companies that are considering alliances, have been acquired or have merged in recent months range from Louis Vuitton SA, the blossoming leather goods maker, to Chau-met, a bankrupt jewelry business that once outlisted monarchs.

"The future of the familyowned business has to change, said Jean Bergeron, executive director of Comité Colbert, a trade association representing 70 French luxury-goods companies that together account for 20 billion francs ($3.3 billion) in annual sales. "They will be forced to become part of something much

He said that many of the association's members, some whose roots date back to the era of Napoléon, are now being courted. "I'm always being asked if I know anyone who wants to sell."

The companies are fetching premium prices, said Mr. Ber-geron, who likened the situation to the interest showed in Silicon Valley companies a decade ago. "People are willing to pay 20, 25, even 30 times earnings to acquire luxury goods companies."

The two companies had announced in June that they would join to form the world's largest iuxury goods company, with combined sales of 13 billion francs ($2.15 billion) and a work force of 10,200.

Besides Givenchy, Vuitton markets a line of leather and lug-eage under the Vuitton brand as well as Veuve Clicquot cham-pagne. It also has a minority stake in Guerlain perfumes. Financière Agache, another

Self-Reliant Dongguan Racks Up Export Orders

DONGGUAN, China — The Chinese government has poured billions of dollars into its special economic zones to turn them into export powerhouses. But without fanfare or help from Beijing, Dongguan is chalking up export orders and earning more foreign currency than any industry and government leaders

Western economists said that Dongguan had $200 million in earnings last year from exports and processing fees, an impressive total coasidering that China's overseas sales totaled $30.9 billion last year. Dongguan, with a population of 1.2 million, is a collection of 32 townships in the rich delta in the southern province of Guangdong, about 60 miles (100 kilometers) from central Hong Kong.

It is home to 6,000 factories, nearly one-third of which finish goods mainly for Hong Kong companies, officials said. Once known chiefly for its lychees and bananas, Dongguan is now turning out shoes, leather products, processed foods and talking teddy bears.

"We are trying to attract foreign business," said Dongguan's deputy mayor, Liu Shuji. "If you can make $1 in Hong Kong," he boasted, "you very receptive to our needs." Some Chinese companies agree. "I came here to buy raw materials," said a plant official from Shanghai. "I could buy them in Shenzhen but it would take a lot more time." Dongguan pays average wages of about 200 yuan a month, about one-third less than factories in Shenzhen.

Officials in Dongguan say that Shenzhen may have focused too much on big export projects.
"Shenzhen overlooked smaller export processing contracts," said Fang Daimei, the prefect of House township in Dongguan. Under those contracts, China carns a fee for finishing goods usually brought in from Hong Kong.
"I think Shenzhen is realizing this now," Mr. Fang said, "and competition from them will increase." Dongenan is building bridges, paving new roads and improving tele-omnumications — with some assistance — to stay competitive.

NEW YORK - Prices on the New York Stock Exchange slid sharply Friday in subdued, pre-weekend trading, giving the market its first three-day losing streak since mid-May.

The Dow Jones industrial average skidded 35.71 to close at 2,639.35, for a total loss over three days of about 83 points.

Broader market indexes joined the retreat. The New York Stock Exchange index fell 2.27 to 182.99 and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index slid 4.34 to 327.04. The price of an average share dropped 53 cents.

Losing issues outnumbered gaining ones by about 3-to-1 among the 2.010 issues traded. About 156.3 million shares changed hands. compared with 163.6 million on Thursday.

Analysts said the persistent climb of interest rates in the bond market and the dollar's relatively weak performance reinforced investors inclination to lock in profits after the stock market's recent advance.

The dollar edged up Friday against most currencies. But the currency's recent weakness and inflation fears prompted by rising oil prices and by the belief that the U.S. economy will remain strong has sent bond prices down and bond yields to their highest levels of the year. bond yields to their highest levels of the year.

One reason rising bond yields can hurt stock prices is that they enhance the attractiveness of interest-bearing instruments relative to stocks. A weakening dollar can make dollar-denominated investments, bonds or stocks, less attractive to foreign investors who fear vulnerability to exchange-rate losses.

There was profit-taking in stocks that have had dramatic moves; those stocks are going to be for sale," said Ralph Blair, an equity trader at Montgomery Securities in San Francisco.

He said the bond market's poor performance and rumors that the Federal Reserve is nudging interest rates up are "unsettling for stocks that have had such a terrific move up and are really stretched out."

"It's just that buyers aren't so aggressive at these levels." "It's not that so much is for sale," he said.

Detroit Edison was the most active NYSE-listed issue, losing h to 15%.

Reebok International followed, falling 1% to 20%. The company said production delays resulting from recent labor unrest in South Korea would result in per share earnings for the third quarter being only slightly higher than profits for the year-ago period.

Texas Utilities was third, falling % to 31%. IBM rose 1/4 to 1661/4. IBM on Friday sold 5.9 million of its 13.7 million shares of Intel Corp... which makes parts for IBM's computers, including the processing chips for its personal computers.

A.C. Nielsen To Acquire Key Rival

NEW YORK - Dun & Bradstreet Corp. said it was expanding its A.C. Nielsen market-research operations by acquiring Information Resources Inc., a test-marketing company, in a $572 million stock swap.

Shareholders of Information Re-jources will receive 0.5084 shares of Dun & Bradstreet stock for each of their current shares, the company said Thursday.

The acquisition comes as Nielsen, which is perhaps best known for its television ratings, finds com-petition increasing for its marketresearch business.

Nielsen also recently suffered a blow when CBS canceled its contract to buy Nielsen's data on what television viewers are watching. CBS signed instead with AGB Television Research of Britain. Officers and directors of Information Resources have backed the merger by giving Dun & Bradstreet irrevocable proxies for their shares.

The deal was announced after the market closed Thursday, but on on Friday Bradstreet stock fell $2 to $65 on the New York Stock Exchange, while Information Resources shares rose $6,50, to $31,125, in over-the-counter trad-

Information Resources, founded in 1979, was a pioneer in what is known as the "behaviorscan technique" for gauging the reaction of consumers to various products. Last year, the company had net earnings of $10 million on revenues of $94 million.

Information Resources will become a new division of Nielsen and will be renamed Nielsen Information Resources. The deal is expected to be completed by the end of the year.

The acquisition requires approval by a majority of Information Resources' shareholders and will be subject to review under the Anti-

Talk of U.K. Joining EMS Is Premature, Analysts Say

LONDON - Market speculation that Britain will soon announce entry into the European Monetary System is premature, analysis say. Reports from Pans that British entry might be on the agenda for a routine meeting of EMS finance ministers on Sept. 12 and 13 does not mean that Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher has softened her opposition to joining, they said Thursday.

The British Treasury said that membership was a separate issue from anticipated discussions on strengthening the EMS, an eightnation system that limits exchange-rate fluctuations.

"Our position is unchanged," a Treasury spokesman said. "We will join when the time is right."

Some analysts dismissed the market speculation as rumor aimed at undermining the pound so that short-sellers could make a profit. "Whenever they have an EMS meeting, all the old issues are trotted out," said Chris Johns, an analyst at the brokerage Phillips & Drew. The pound came under pressure earlier this week partly as a result

Expos Shut Out Padres, 3-0

SAN DIEGO - Montreal's Bryn Smith wasn't sure he could pitch at all when he took the mound. Then inspiration got the best of him.

East, the right-hander overcame a sore shoulder and became just the second Expos starter to win this month. Smith, who had elbow surgery in the off-season and had not started in eight days because of an aching shoulder, checked the San Diego Padres on four hits over five innings Thursday night for a 3-0 victory

"The shoulder's basically kind of worn down. Now, it's back in the rebuilding phase," Smith said. "It seems to be coming back real good. There was no pain

Smith, who had not won since July 29, said he and the Expos manager, Buck Rodgers, had decided before the game to pull him after five innings. The main thing was to find out if I could pitch, Smith said. "The last two times out I was giving up five runs a game. I was not doing myself or the team any good."

The only other Montreal slarter to win this month was Dennis Martinez, who beat the New York Mets on Aug. 10.

The victory pushed the third-place Expos within five games of the St. Louis Cardinals and half a game of the Mets in the National League East

"This is an important road trip," Rodgers said. "We'll know at the end of this trip whether we're a contender or not." The Expos moved on to Los An-

Brett's Homer Wins Game For the Royals' New Coach

KANSAS CITY, Missouri - Hired to provide the leadership to bring Kansas City a division title in 36 games, John Wathan got the first one out of the way dramatically.

Wathan watched as his former teammate and roommate. George Breat, homered with two out in the bottom of the tenth inning Thursday night to give him a 3-2 victory over the Texas Rangers in his managerial debut.

Wathan succeeded Billy Gardner, who was fired Thursday as the loyals struggled to a 62-64 record. The job went to Wathan after Hal McRae, the hitting instructor, declined the opportunity to become the fourth black manager in major league history, saying he would not accept an interim role.

A decision about who will manage next year will be made later. McRae has said since he retired earlier this season as a Royals ayer that he wanted to spend more time with his family.

"I know it's a tough job and you have to make a strong commitment to it," McRae said. "To me, the most important people are the players. I didn't want to be in a position of protecting myself, always trying to save my job. I wanted to create an environment where the players could work and get their jobs done without worrying about wins and losses."

The offer to McRae followed an announcement this spring by owner Ewing Kauffman, the team's co-owner, that the Royals would develop a plan to move minorities into management position Despite playing under .500, the Royals trail the Minnesota Twins by only three games in the American League West.

Wathan has been in the Royals organization for 17 years as a player, coach and manager. He was a catcher, first baseman and outfielder in 10 big league seasons with Kansas City.

"Even though I have limited experience as a manager, I think the way I played the game and the way I studied the game is in my favor," said Wathan, who was managing the Royals' AAA affiliate at Omaha.

Former Eagle Indicted in Drug Ring

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Dennis Franks, a former center for the Philadelphia Eagles and briefly for the Detroit Lions, was among 15 people indicated Thursday on charges of participating in a cocaine ring. Franks, 34, was charged with one count of conspiring to distribute cocaine between April 1981 and June 1983, Tina Williams Gabbrielli, assistant U.S. attorney, said. The ring, catering to young professionals, sold more than 2,000 pounds (900 kilograms) of cocaine in 14 states, including in New England, Florida and Colorado, prosecutors said.

Franks was signed by the Eagles as a free agent in 1976. After being cut by the Eagles in 1978, he played the 1979 season with Devoit. The indictment charges Franks with "buying the cocaine for resale," Gabbrielli said. "We have no comment as to where it was going."

Meadowlands to Conduct Hazard Tests

EAST RUTHERFORD, New Jersey (AP) - The New Jersey Sports and Exposition Authority announced Friday that it would conduct environmental testing around the Meadowlands sports complex to allay fears that people have been exposed to health hazards.

The decision comes less than a week after New York Giants tackle Karl Nelson was diagnosed as having Hodgkin's disease, a cancer of the lymphatic system. He is the fourth Giants player to have played at Giants Stadium to be diagnosed as having cancer in the past seven and a half years. The Stadium was built on a former landfill 11 years ago. The sports authority earlier this week said it believed the area around the stadium was environmentally safe and did not pose a health threat.

New York Times Service
REYCLIFF, Montana—The
Indian stood by his blanket. quietly offering his wares to the travelers slowly moving past. Off to the side, farther up the hill for a better view, another Indian sat vigilantly watching the western horizon for any sign of troopers.

The scene was not outside the gate of any 19th-century territorial army fort. It was a modern-day rest area on a modern-day Western trail. Interstate 90. But it did help show how much - and how little - some of life has changed in this beautifully rolling rural area of southern Montana, 120 miles west of the Custer battlefield.

The Indian by the blanket was Huskie Yezzie, a Navajo, one of hundreds who wander the back roads and front roads of most Western states for four months every summer selling their homemade jewelry and trinkets like generations before. "We live on the reservation in Arizona, but in summer we go wherever the tourists go."

For eight months of every year, the 43-year-old Yezzie stays at his reservation home where the seven members of his family make thousands of necklaces, bracelets and headbands. Yezzie did not learn jewelry-making from his father. "I never saw my father. I just picked it up watching others."
The colorful silver and stone sets are stockpiled in the Yezzie house. Come May, Yezzie and his two sons, Delford, 15, and Ron, 18, pack their pickup truck and move

"We never know where we're going," he said. "But we never go the same place two years straight. We don't want no trouble."

The trouble, Yezzie says, stems from his refusal to buy any peddling license, which he regards as a meaningless piece of paper created by a bureaucracy of white men to control others, namely Indians. Some Indians fall for such rules, he says. Others do not. "I do not."

Yezzie doesn't like officials or alien rules telling him where he can go and what he can do at what times. He favors selling on Saturday mornings at suburban shopping malls in California, where patrons have enough money and curiosity to buy Indian jewelry. He also floats around the outskirts of local carnivals in Oregon, Washington and Idaho where fair-goers are in spending moods. And he regularly hits the Indian reunions and powwows in Montana. Wvoming and the Dakotas that attract happy tribal members home every

But the best sales of Yezzie jewelry take place at Interstate rest areas, between 10 A.M. and 2 P.M. in August. He figures that's before the traveling families get tired and grumpy and realize how much vacation money they have spent that day. Very few items over $20 sell. Most popular are the $4 bracelers and the $10 necklaces, some with turquoise and some with small silver beads. A $10 necklace brings the Yezzies $7 in profit. They sleep in their truck, catch fish for food and take the earnings home to share with the family. The money is collected from ourtomers, no receipts, no sales tax and who knows about income tax. Dozens of times every year local police officers threaten Yezzie with a ticket. "But we just shuffle off like they say." he notes, "and they don't do nothing."

STATE troopers, however, are another matter. Several times the troopers have warned the Yezzies not to sell their goods on public property along the Interstates. They talk about arrest. So Yezzie invested in a pair of binoculars for his son, the lookout, whose eyes never leave the cement lanes back down the road. On a signal from a son, Yezzie scoops up his jewelry, which is con-veniently taped to the blanket for a quick exit. And the trio, their jewelry and truck are moving along the highway melting into the traffic before the trooper's car even enters the rest area. Soon, the Yezzies will head for home, the end of another 4,200mile summer sales trip. There, they will start making next year's goods. But what was the next day's stop for them? Yezzie paused and looked at the stranger closely, "Don't know," he said cautiously,

"wherever we go."
with his sons? "No," he said, "No picture. I tell my sons you white men are good at smooth talk. But there's always a trick. No picture. It's a free country."

Israelis Debate Censorship of Films, Plays

By Roni C. Rabin ERUSALEM - Israeli society, accustomed to a free and outspoken press and public, has in recent months become embroiled in a fierce debate over a government censorship board's screening of all movies and theater productions.

The controversy was sparked last December when, just two days before the opening of "The Last Secular Jew," a musical satire portraying Israel as a Jewish theocracy, the Film and Theater Censorship Board banned the Artists, writers and theater enthusiasts reacted with an outcry that forced the board to retreat and allow "The Last Secular Jew" to go on, with only minor revi-

The debate was rekindled in July when the board prohibited people under 18 from seeing the play "Yellow Time," a work based on a journalist's exposé of Israel's military occupation of the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. The board felt that the sensitive and complex issues the drama ad-dressed should be limited to a more mature audience. Although the article's original text had al-ready been published in a maga-zine and in book form, a board official said the play required "the viewer's mature and responsible discretion."

The board rescinded its decision a week later, but only after provoking widespread criticism. David Grossman, author of the magazine article that inspired the play, called the age limit "ridiculous," especially since young men and women in Israel are drafted into the army at 18.

The uproar over such incidents has left in its wake a much sharper awareness of the contradictions between Israel's democratic traditions and the ceasors' desires to reduce tensions among the country's heterogenous but volatile population. The controversy also renewed the legislative effort to outlaw the censorship statutes, which derived from regulations imposed during the British man-ment, who sponsored the legisla-tion, which has already passed a The first, excessive violence, is the

But Yehoshua Justrean, chairman of the censorship board, says his group performs a "moderating function" in a society wracked by tensions — ethnic and political religious and secular within and without, Furthermore, he said, the board is extremely liberal in its views

During the past three years, he said, only 12 "excessively violent" movies have been banned of the more than 700 mostly Americanmade films submitted for approval. Six plays, of 419 submitted during the past seven years, have been banned, he said.

But the board does not keep figures on the number of times it requires modifications and deletions before licensing a show. Such alteration took place last year, with both "The Last Secular Jew" and the Broadway show "Oh! Calcutta!," which faced a ban until the producers agreed to alter six scenes.

According to Justman, the board's areas of concern seem to

The first, excessive violence, is the primary reason for either impos-ing age restrictions, banning or occasionally even cutting scenes out of films. The second category applies to films or plays consid ered to be either "political speeches" or "incitement against the state." These were the reasons given for excluding one film and four Arabic plays in recent years, (A separate system of military censorship oversees all news re-ports issued from Israel dealing with military and security-related matters, as well as written materi-

Most disturbing, however, to the majority of Israelis is a third category that encompasses what the board calls plays involving "assaults on basic Jewish values."

al distributed in the Israeli-occupied territories.)

"It's a question of where freedom of expression stops, and assault and injury to others begin," Justman said.

The board's policy is to avoid political censorship — thus, Just-man said, it gives the green light to plays such as Yehoshua Sobol's work "The Palestinian," a sophisticated look at what happens when a young Israeli man falls in love with a Palestinian woman.

On the other hand, Israeli play-wrights grappling with difficult, relevant material, often touch a raw nerve with the censors. In "The Last Socular Jew," for example, censors insisted on deleting what the playwright called a crucial scene, when the last secular Jew in Israel - the only one left who has not abandoned his allegiance to the state in exchange for riches and obedience to an ultra-Orthodox Jewish lifestyle is forced to make fun of the na-

That was the heart of the play, the turning point, the scene that gave the play its entire meaning," said Shmuel Hasfari, the play-wright, who removed his name from the playbill in protest and refuses to accept royalty pay-ments from the show. That scene was crucial in order to jolt the viewers, to confront them with what is happening. Now the play is just a series of satiric sketch and that is not what I intended." for The New York Times.

EMPLOYMENT

DOMESTIC POSITIONS AVAILABLE

An outright ban was imposed in 1982 on Hanoch Levin's work, "The Patriot," a political sature about an Israeli willing to pay any moral price to get a visa for the United States and escape Israel's wars and inflation. The censorship board branded the play "gravely offensive to the fundamental values of the state and Jewish tradition."

In 1985, the board barred Ephraim Returns to the Army, a play about the corrupting effects the Israeli military occupa tion of the West Bank and Gaza Strip have on one Israeli army officer. The objection, Justman says, is to a scene in which an officer, originally from Eastern Europe, tells young soldiers entering an Arab town not to harass a Palestinian boy who is carrying a suspicious looking school bag. "Stop him, check his school bag. "Stop him, eheck his school bag, he has jewelry, give it back to him," the officer says.

A younger soldier asks him how he knew.

"That's how I transferred my family's jewelry," the older officer says, "when the Germans came."

says, "when the Germans came." Israel's Supreme Court recently overturned the board's ban on the play, but Justman said he would resign from his post if the play is ever performed in Israel. The theater originally planning to produce the play dropped the work and there are currently no plans for production.

'i cannot allow the comparison of Israeli soldiers to Nazis," he said. "It is too sensitive to too many people in this country. There are limits, even to freedom

Within the artistic community itself, there is a pervasive fear that, without the formal censorship board, theaters will exercise self-censorship in their selection of scripts, due to fear of libel suits and of losing funds from official and semiofficial bodies.

Ironically, "The Last Secular Jew" became a box-office hit as crowds flocked to the theater, despite poor reviews, simply to see what the fuss was all about. Hasfari said that, despite the changes in the script, the ban succeeded in driving home the play's message.
